Synopsis

Yoshie, assistant and sister to the geisha Kikuyakko, has an unusual power. Hikaru, a young leader of the Tengun army recognises this, and so decides to recruit her. Yoshie and Kikuyakko believed that Hikaru and the Tengun army are trying to overturn the corrupt government. They agree to undertake operations implanting robotics blades and missiles into their bodies, to make them into cyborgs. However soon they find out that the Tengun army are actually a group of mass murderers, using kidnapped young girls as soldiers. Their fight to bring down the Tengun thus begins.

Noboru Iguchi

Noboru Iguchi is respected throughout Japan as a talented character actor having served in one of the Japan's biggest theater companies. He recently shifted gears and began directing films receiving widespread acclaims. His most well known films include "Koi-suru yôchû", "Manji", and "Cat-Eyed Boy". His latest film, "The Mache Girl" has been distributed worldwide, with great success. Before the movie's release, a trailer for "The Machine Girl" played on YouTube received staggering one million hits. "RoboGeisha" will be his second international film release.
